NO DEMOCRATIC WALKOVER.

The fact that the Republican party has split naturally brings confidence to the Democrats of the country as to their winning the election in November.

For two months prior to the Baltimore Convention it was quite evident that the divisions among the Republicans were aiding the chances for a Democratic victory, and when that convention met every member of it felt that success was very probable in the campaign.

For one month now the Republican factions have been doing better service for the Democratic party than the most zealous Democrats could do for it, and it has possibly been good policy for the Democrats throughout the

A Remedy No Family Should Do Without

No matter how healthy a human being may be, it is safe to say that not many months have passed without some obstruction of the bowels. In other words, constipation, even if only temporary, is a恼ing, the dull feeling may stay after the meal, if it is laxative is not taken that night it is certain that sleep will not be sound, and when it does come it will not be deep. Hence, it is important for you and for all the members of your family that a good, reliable laxative be always kept in the house for just such emergencies. You want it at hand. No family that is real of its health can do without such a remedy. But the question is which laxative on hand is also of vast success that may affect the electoral votes of those states, and in these days of independent voting and of three parties to arrange combinations with independent or dissatisfied voters, situations may be changed with surprising rapidity.

Four weeks have passed since the Democratic candidates were named at Baltimore, but if the leaders of the party have done more than to rejoice at Republican differences their work is not apparent to the public.

This campaign is to be no walkover for the Democratic party, and it is not wise politics to rely upon weakness, in the opposition's ranks.

"FOR REVENUE ONLY."

So it is to be a Tariff "for revenue only" if the Democrats get in. Well, Great Britain has a Tariff for revenue only, which is the nearest approach to Free-Trade in practice in any great nation. And Great Britain collects a duty on coffee and tea, which come into this country free. She collects it because practically everybody uses it, rich and poor, and the revenue from it grows rapidly. They come into this country free because, not producing them ourselves, they do not enter into competition with our own products, and it is desired that the consumer get them as cheaply as possible.

A Tariff for revenue only is one intended to raise a certain amount of money, without regard to who pays it. A Protective Tariff is one which puts the duty on articles that are manufactured more cheaply abroad than they can be in this country without wage reductions and so equalizes the differences in the cost of labor. The nearest the United States ever came to having a Tariff for revenue only since the policy of Protection was first inaugurated in 1893 to 1896. That was the soup-house era in American history. The New York World at that time gave away more than a million loaves of bread to families that were starving because the business of the country had been paralyzed. Evidently The World is itching to again embark in such a charity, for it is advocating the election to the Presidency of Woodrow Wilson, who is and always has been an out-and-out Free-Trader and subscribes to the Democratic platform of a "Tariff for revenue only."—Johnstown (Pa.) Roosevelt Leaders Make Southern Negroes Take a Back Seat

Chicago Record-Herald.

Southern N-gro delegates have been formed by the National Provisional Committee of the Progressive party that the organization is to be a "white man's party"—at least as far as Dixie is concerned.

To emphasize the colored brethren were "steam rollered" Saturday in a manner which left them crushed and speechless. They were bluntly told they were being offered up as a sacrifice to the Southern Democratic "white" vote. If they want to ride on the rear seats of the band wagon they can do—so—cast their vote for Roosevelt. If they wish—but they must keep quiet and not attempt to obtain leadership.

Sarsfield Aboo Heard Call of Wild

vinced a desire to be transferred to the Grand Central station in time to catch a train for Millwood, N. Y. "Clack-clack-clack," sounded the ample hoofs of Sarsfield Aboo on the wet and shiny pavements until Eighth street and Fifth avenue was reached. At that crossing Jehu Ford endeavored to urge Sarsfield Aboo across the car tracks ahead of an automobile proceeding from east to west.

The automobile struck the rear right wheel of the cab and swung it about so violently that Ford was jolted from his seat and fell sprawling to the street. With a long honk of the horn the automobile sped west and Sarsfield Aboo, elevating his head and tail, sped north.

Feeling the call of the wild or something, Sarsfield Aboo extended himself with every jump. By the time he reached Ninth street he was moving like Ballyhoo Bey coming down the stretch under whip and spur.

Delehanty and Herrington, glib in stature and cool of mind, saw the runaway coming. With busineslike nonchalance they placed themselves so Sarsfield Aboo and the trailing cab would have to come between them.

Delehanty grabbed the bridle and hung on. Herrington got the reins and hung on. The cops fell and were dragged across Fourth street, but the weight told on Sarsfield Aboo and as he essayed to turn and shake them off he got tangled up in his own feet and fell.

David Harum "Out Harumed" in Chicago

CHICAGO.—When Samuel Baker, 1106 South Wood street, had to knock down part of his barn and rebuild it to get back on its feet a horse which he had recently purchased he decided that he had been swindled by one Harry Goldstein, 1024 South Robey street, and brought suit against him.

How David Harum was out-harumed was shown at the hearing before Municipal Judge Dolan. The horse had been guaranteed to be able "to lie down and get up." According to Baker, the animal could lie down, all right, but getting it back on its feet again was like moving the Alps.

Baker testified that he had tried the horse for one day, but had neglected to test it on the "lying down" proposition. He said he returned the horse to Goldstein and, after some dickerling, in which the purchase price was reduced from $125 to $80, the deal was closed.

When he placed the animal in his stable for the night, the horse lay down. It still was lying down when Baker went to the stable the next morning. Baker pulled and tugged and tugged and pulled at the halter, but in vain. Assistance was summoned, props were placed under the prostrate animal and impromptu tricks were tried. It was of no use. Every time the horse was roused a few inches it fell back harder and was imbedded deeper in the straw.

"I couldn't budge him," Baker told the court. "The horse lay there sort of helpless. Finally we had to knock out part of the barn and drag him out."

Baker said he then returned the horse to Goldstein and demanded his money back. Goldstein testified that he bought back the horse from Baker for $20. This was denied by the complainant, who alleged that Goldstein sold the horse to another purchaser for $55. Goldstein said that when the horse was returned it showed signs of ill treatment, and he offered to prove to Judge Dolan that it could both lie down and get up "as advertised." The court declined to witness the exhibition.

HIS FIRST CIRCUS

Colonel Will Owens Tells About the Good Old Times in Maysville in 1846

There are certain things which remain in our memory box so long as life may last—a little quiet at times; but a sudden thought or action will awaken them, they are suddenly brought to view, and we live them over again for a time; then put them back onto their proper shelf for future use.

With me today is the vision of my first circus. Ah! who once permitted to enter fairyland can forget the picture? of his first circus? I was one of two six-year-old boys who were taken along to a circus for the first time. The tent occupied a vacant lot on the South side of Second street, below Fish (now Wall) street about the year 1846. The man had picked out me because I was his brother-in-law, and had selected Ben Jacobs because he was the son of a friend who was a fellow tradesman. Fish street was a long distance from home; but the goal was a circus, the Mecca of young boys. And this was a first circus to these boys. At home they were used to the sight of one steadi in a room. Imagine, then, with what wonder their eyes were startled by the glare from not less than a hundred candles, shining from a pyramid of rings, dangling suspended around the center-pole, which supported the tent. These rings could be raised or lowered as the exigencies of the business demanded. The lights shone upon the happy faces of other boys and men, women and girls, who all looked happy. It was my fairy-land in gala dress.

And there was the band. What inspiring music! Not a bad note in their entire selection. Circus music of the older times seemed always to me to be in a class by itself. In after years a strain or theme, coming in a piece of music being played by a modern band, would strike my ear and lostlessly the circus would come up, to be re-enjoyed for a brief minute. And the memory-heart was gladdened at the remembrance of the happiness of other days.

Soon the men came to raise the lights and make preparation for the start of the evening—the grand entry. With a great fanfare from the band, the procession entered through. It was a fairytale for the boys, the grandest ever which has remained with me for over sixty-five years. I have seen other grand entries, other parades, but none over came up to this one—ever. Then came the riders, the clowns, and the ringmaster, and the little lady who, while riding on horse back jumped through the paper-covered hoop amid the plaudits of a pleased crowd.

After this a performer came into the ring, and a small cannon was placed on the back of his neck and shoulders. While being held there by his hands, a man took a cigar from his mouth and touched priming powder to the spark and the cannon went off with a loud report. The man who held the cannon seemed to be unmoved. A larger man came into the ring; a larger cannon was placed on his neck and shoulders; the spark of a cigar applied, and a much louder report ensued, while the man stood unmoved by the effect.

A house was built in the ring; a young lady appeared and entered the house, showing herself at an open window. A torch was applied, and soon the structure was in flames. The lady at the window making a cry for help, a white horse riderless, ran into the ring, and rushed into the burning house, coming out almost immediately bearing no bias back the young lady. The band played and the people shouted and applauded, and the ring was put out the fire and cleared up the muss, getting ready for the next performance.

I have never heard or read of this horse's act being repeated by any other horse in this country. But some years afterward I read about a horse in Astley's Circus in London, England, which could do the same.

And then came the calamity that woke up the boy to the realization of the fact that for them fairyland had closed for the night. The ringmaster and the clown came now and the clown was very funny disposed, so much so, that our protégé friend tried to "kid" the clown; but the clown shot back his repartee with such certainty that the laugh that followed made our protector angry, and he suddenly arose and left the tent taking the boys away with him, thus shutting out the lights and scenes so fast fulfilling to them.

"Sic transit gloria."

At this time, and for some years later, the animal show and the circus were not connected. The animal show was liberally patronized, being recognized by all people, while the circus was under a cloud. Once there came an animal show and put up its tent next to a circus tent, known as "River's Circus."

After the animal show was closed, one had the privilege of going to the circus, while the good people went home. The next year Harmon, the intrepid showman, advertised an animal show and circus under one tent, one price of admission to both. Then came the discussion as to whether it was right to go to an animal show having a circus attachment.

Some were in favor of cutting out the whole thing; while others, more liberal, said that one might go to the animal show, but need not stay to see the circus.

While the discussion was going on, Edie James Hayes of the Christian Church came into the office of The Express on a matter of business. Major Ross, of happy memory, said,

"Elder, we want you to settle a point. We are to have the animal show and the circus all in one this year. Now, is it wrong for Church members to attend?"

"Well," said the Elder, "it is generally considered that it is not wrong, but highly beneficial for one to attend the animal show.

Therefore as it is not wrong to do so, they may attend the animal show; but it is not human nature for them to leave when the circus begins."

Heretofore the dog show feature of the State Fair has been confined exclusively to collies, but this year the management has decided to have a bench show for all breeds of dogs, and to that end dog fanciers throughout the state have been invited to participate in the show. Since the invitations were first issued by the management through the press several weeks ago many of the fanciers in every section of the state have joined the movement to make this feature of the fair a success. It is doubtful if there is a breed of dog known to this section of the country that is not bred and raised in Kentucky, and it is the purpose of the officers of the fair to have every breed represented. For several years the breeders of dogs, other than collies, have endeavored to interest the management of the State Fair in a bench show that would include all breeds. The bench show will be under the personal supervision of a man who is well versed in the breeding of dogs, and valuable prizes will shortly be named, to be distributed to the winners in the various classes.

The show will be held under the rules of the American Kennel Club. A bench show with the approval of the American Kennel Club will more than likely attract high-class dogs from New York, Chicago and all parts of the country.
